Full Title of Research Paper

Begin the first paragraph of your research paper with a half-inch indent. Avoid the temptation of using the heading “Introduction” at the start of your paper. Your first sentence is what should immediately follow the title.

As your paper develops, you will want to incorporate your research. Sometimes you will use direct quotes that “duplicate the original source word for word” (Jones & Brooks, 2011, p. 3). Other times, you will put the ideas from your research into your own words, and that paraphrased material must also be cited in-text (Xiang, Cooper, Wilson & Liang, 2012). Even if your information came from a website without an author, you must cite that source (Corporation, 2012).

At the end of your paper, you will list all of your sources in a References list. The References page begins on a new page and must be included in every research paper.
References

doi 10.1056/j.cti.111.111.111

Does it say References at the top of your page, centered, and without bolding or underlining?

Is the References List page double spaced?

Are the citations in alphabetical order by the first word/name of each citation (ignoring initial articles like “The”, “A” and “An”)?

Are the citations properly constructed according to APA style?

Are the second and subsequent lines of any citations longer than one line indented half an inch? This is called a “hanging indent” in your paragraph settings.

Does each citation in the References page have a matching in-text citation in your assignment?
